The following Letter is taken from a VIRGINIA GAZETTE.

To his Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Eſquire.

SIR,

I Am too well acquainted with your character to ſuppoſe you can bear to be told of your faults with temper. You are too much of the ſoldier, and too little of the philoſopher, for reprehenſion. With this opinion of your Excellency, I have more reaſon to believe that this letter will be ſerviceable to the province of New-York than uſeful or entertaining to its governor. The beginning of your adminiſtration in this province was marked with oppreſſion, and diſtreſs to its inhabitants. Theſe, Sir, I do not place to your account; they derived from higher authority than your's. You were, however, a dull, yet willing inſtrument, in the hands of the Britiſh miniſtry, to promote the means of both. You called together ſome of the principal inhabitants of your neighbourhood, and in a ſtrange inverted ſelf-affecting ſpeech told them that you had left your native country, friends and connections, and had taken upon yourſelf the government of North-Carolina with no other view than to ſerve it. In the next breath, Sir, you adviſed them to ſubmit to the ſtamp-act, and to become ſlaves. How could you reconcile ſuch baneful advice with ſuch friendly profeſſions? But, Sir, ſelf-contradictions with you have not been confined to words only; they have been equally extended to actions. On other occaſions you have played the Governor with an air of greater dignity and importance than any of your predeceſſors; on this your Excellency was meanly content to ſolicit the currency of ſtamped paper in private companies. But alas! miniſterial approbation is the firſt wiſh of your heart; it is the beſt ſecurity you have for your office. Engaged as you were in this diſgraceful negotiation, the more important duties of the governor were forgotten, or wilfully neglected. In murmuring diſcontent, and public confuſion, you left the colony committed to your care, for near eighteen months together, without calling an aſſembly. The ſtamp-act repealed, you called one; and a fatal one it was! Under every influence your character afforded you, at this aſſembly was laid the foundation of all the miſchief which has ſince befallen this unhappy province. A grant was made to the crown of five thouſand pounds to erect a houſe for the reſidence of a governor; and you, Sir, were ſolely intruſted with the management of it. The infant and impoveriſhed ſtate of the country could not afford to make ſuch a grant, and it was your duty to have been acquainted with the circumſtances of the colony you governed. This truſt proved equally fatal to the intereſt of the province and to your Excellency's honor. You made uſe of it, Sir, to gratify your vanity or leaving at both. It at once afforded you an elegant monument, of your taſte in building behind you, and giving the miniſtry an inſtance of your great influence and addreſs in your new government. You, therefore, regardleſs of every moral as well as legal obligation, changed the plan of a province houſe for that of a palace worthy the reſidence of a prince of the blood, and augmented the expence to fifteen thouſand pounds. Here, Sir, you betrayed your truſt diſgracefully to the governor and diſhonourably to the man. This liberal and ingenious ſtroke in politicks may, for all I know, have promoted you to the government of New-York. Promotions may have been the reward of ſuch ſort of merit. Be this as it will, you reduced the next aſſembly you met to the unjuſt alternative of granting ten thouſand pounds more or ſinking the five thouſand they had already granted. They choſe the former. It was moſt pleaſing to the governor, but directly contrary to the ſenſe of their conſtituents. This public impoſition upon a people, who, from poverty, were hardly able to pay the neceſſary expences of government, occaſioned general diſcontent, which your Excellency, with wonderful addreſs, improved into a civil war.

In a colony without money, and among a people almoſt deſperate with diſtreſs, public profuſion ſhould have been carefully avoided; but unfortunately for the country, you were bred a ſoldier, and have a natural as well as acquired fondneſs for military parade. You were intruſted to run a Cherokee boundary about ninety miles in length; this little ſervice at once afforded you an opportunity of exerciſing your military talents and making a ſplendid exhibition of yourſelf to the Indians. To a gentleman of your Excellency's turn of mind, this was no unpleaſing proſpect; you marched to perform it, in a time of profound peace, at the head of a company of militia, in all the pomp of war, and returned with the honourable title conferred on you by the Cherokees, of GREAT WOLF of NORTH-CAROLINA. This line of marked trees, and your Excellency's prophetic title, coſt the province a greater ſum than two-pence a head on all the taxable perſons in it for one year would pay.

Your next expedition, Sir, was a more important one. Four or five hundred ignorant people, who called themſelves regulators, took it into their heads to quarrel with their repreſentative, a gentleman particularly honoured with your Excellency's eſteem. They fooliſhly charged him with every diſtreſs they felt; and, in revenge, ſhot two or three muſket balls through his houſe. They at the ſame time reſcued a horſe which had been ſeized for the public tax. Theſe crimes were puniſhable in the courts of law, and at that time the criminals were amenable to legal proceſs. Your Excellency, and your confidential friends, it ſeems, were of a different opinion. All your duty could poſſibly require of you on this occaſion, if it required any thing at all, was to direct a proſecution againſt the offender. You ſhould have carefully avoided becoming a party in the diſpute. But, Sir, your genius could not lie ſtill; you inliſted yourſelf a volunteer in this ſervice, and entered into a negotiation with the regulators, which at once diſgraced you and encouraged them. They deſpiſed the governor who had degraded his own character by taking part in a private quarrel, and inſulted the man whom they conſidered as perſonally their enemy. The terms of accommodation your Excellency had offered them were treated with contempt. What they were I never knew; they could not have related to public offences; theſe belong to another juriſdiction. All hopes of ſettling the mighty conteſt by treaty ceaſing, you prepared to decide it by means more agreeable to your martial diſpoſition, an appeal to the ſword. You took the field in September 1768, at the head of ten or twelve hundred men, and publiſhed an oral manifeſto, the ſubſtance of which was, that you had taken up arms to protect a ſuperior court of juſtice from inſult. Permit me here to aſk you, Sir, why you were apprehenſive for the court? Was the court apprehenſive for itſelf? Did the judges, or the attorney-general, addreſs your Excellency for protection? So far from it, Sir, if theſe gentlemen are to be believed, they never entertained the leaſt ſuſpicion of any inſult, unleſs it was that which they afterwards experienced from the undue influence you offered to extend to them, and the military diſplay of drums, colours, and guards, with which they were ſurrounded and diſturbed. How fully has your conduct, on a like occaſion ſince, teſtified that you acted in this inſtance from paſſion, and not from principle! In September 1770, the regulators forcibly obſtructed the proceedings of Hillſborough Superior court, obliged the officers to leave it, and blotted out the records. A little before the next term, when their contempt of courts was ſufficiently proved, you wrote an inſolent letter to the judges, and attorney-general, commanding them to attend it. Why did you not protect the court at this time? You will bluſh at the anſwer, Sir. The conduct of the regulators at the preceding term made it more than probable that thoſe gentlemen would be inſulted at this, and you were not unwilling to ſacrifice them to increaſe the guilt of your enemies.

Your Excellency ſaid that you had armed to protect a court. Had you ſaid to revenge the inſult you and your friends had received, it would have been more generally credited in this country. The men for the trial of whom the court was ſo extravagantly protected, of their own accord ſqueezed through a croud of ſoldiers and ſurrendered themſelves, as they were bound to do by their recognizance.

Some of theſe people were convicted, fined, and impriſoned; which put an end to a piece of knight errantry equally aggravating to the populace, and burthenſome to this country. On this occaſion, Sir, you were alike ſucceſsful in the diffuſion of a military ſpirit through the colony, and in the warlike exhibition you ſet before the public; you at once diſpoſed the vulgar to hoſtilities, and proved the legality of arming, in caſes of diſpute, by example. Thus warranted by preſident, and tempered by ſympathy, popular diſcontent ſoon became reſentment and oppoſition; revenge ſuperſeded juſtice, and force the laws of the country; courts of law were treated with contempt, and government itſelf ſet at defiance. For upwards of two months was the frontier part of the country left in a ſtate of perfect anarchy. Your Excellency then thought fit to conſult the repreſentatives of the people, who preſented you a bill which you paſſed into a law. The deſign of this act was to puniſh paſt riots in a new juriſdiction, to create new offences, and to ſecure the collection of the public tax, which, ever ſince the province had been eſtabliſhed, [illegible] former law, confined to the particular diſtrict in which they were committed. This act did not change that juriſdiction; yet your Excellency, in the fulneſs of your power, eſtabliſhed a new one for the trial of ſuch crimes in a different diſtrict. Whether you did this through ignorance or deſign, can only be determined in your own breaſt; it was equally violative of a ſacred right every Britiſh ſubject is intitled to, of being tried by his neighbours, and a poſitive law of the province you yourſelf had ratified. In this foreign juriſdiction, bills of indictment were preferred, and found, as well for felonies as riots, againſt a number of regulators; they refuſed to ſurrender themſelves within the time limited by the riot act, and your Excellency opened your third campaign. Theſe indictments charged the crimes to have been committed in Orange county, in a diſtinct diſtrict from that in which the court was held. The Superior court law prohibits proſecution for capital offences in any other diſtrict than that in which they were committed. What diſtinctions the gentlemen of the long robe might make on ſuch an occaſion I do not know, but it appears to me thoſe indictments might as well be found in your Excellency's kitchen; and give me leave to tell you, Sir, that a man is not bound to anſwer to a charge that a court has no authority to make, nor doth the law puniſh a neglect to perform that which it doth not command. The riot act declared thoſe only outlawed who refuſed to anſwer to indictments legally found. Thoſe who had been capitally charged were illegally indicted, and could not be outlaws; yet your Excellency proceeded againſt them as ſuch. I mean to expoſe your blunders, not to defend their conduct. That was as inſolent and daring as the deſperate ſtate your adminiſtration had reduced them to could poſſibly occaſion. I am willing to give your full credit for every ſervice you have rendered this country. Your active and gallant behaviour, in extinguiſhing the flame you yourſelf had kindled, does you great honor. For once your military talents were uſeful to the province; you bravely met in the field, and vanquiſhed an hoſt of ſcoundrels whom you had made intrepid by abuſe. It ſeems difficult to determine, Sir, whether your Excellency is more to be admired for your ſkill in creating the cauſe, or your bravery in ſuppreſſing the effect. This ſingle action would have blotted out, forever, half the evils of your adminiſtration: But alas, Sir! the conduct of the general after his victory was more diſgraceful to the hero who obtained it, than that of the man before it had been to the governor. Why did you ſtain ſo great an action with the blood of a priſoner who was in a ſtate of inſanity? The execution of James Few was inhuman; that miſerable wretch was intitled to life, till nature, or the laws of his country, deprived him of it. The battle of the Alamance was over; the ſoldier was crowned with ſucceſs, and the peace of the province reſtored. There was no neceſſity for the infamous example of an arbitrary execution, without judge or jury. I can freely forgive you, Sir, for killing Robert Thompſon at the beginning of the battle; he was your priſoner, and was making his eſcape to fight againſt you. The laws of ſelf preſervation ſanctified the action, and juſtly intitle your Excellency to an act of indemnity.

The ſacrifice of Few, under all its criminal circumſtances, could neither atone for his crime nor abate your rage; this taſk was reſerved for his unhappy parents. Your vengeance, Sir, in this inſtance, it ſeems moved in a retrograde direction to that propoſed in the ſecond commandment againſt idolators, you viſited the ſins of the child upon the fathers, and, for want of the third and fourth generation to extend it to, collaterally divided it between brothers and ſiſters. The heavy affliction with which the untimely death of a ſon had burthened his parents, was ſufficient to have cooled the reſentment of any man whoſe heart was ſuſceptible of the feelings of humanity; yours, I am afraid, is not a heart of that kind! If it is, why did you add to the diſtreſſes of that family? Why refuſe the petition of the town of Hillſborough in favour of them, and unrelentingly deſtroy as far as you could, the means of their future exiſtence? It was cruel, Sir, and unworthy a ſoldier.

Your conduct to others after your ſucceſs, whether it reſpected perſon or property, was as lawleſs as it was unneceſſarily expenſive to the colony. When your Excellency had exemplified the power of government in the death of a hundred regulators, the ſurvivers to a man, became proſelytes to government, they readily ſwallowed your new coin'd oath to be obedient to the laws of the province, and to pay the public taxes. It is a pity, Sir, that in deviſing this oath you had not attended to the morals of thoſe people. You might eaſily have reſtrained every criminal inclination, and have made them good men, as well as good ſubjects. The battle of the Alamance had equally diſpoſed them to moral and to political conviction; there was no neceſſity, Sir, when the people were reduced to obedience, to ravage the country, or to inſult individuals.

Had your Excellency nothing elſe in view than to enforce a ſubmiſſion to the laws of the country, you might ſafely have diſbanded the army within ten days after your victory; in that time the chiefs of the regulators were run away, and their deluded followers had returned to their homes. Such a meaſure would have ſaved the province twenty thouſand pounds at leaſt. But, Sir, you had farther employment for the army; you were, by an extraordinary buſtle in adminiſtering oaths, and diſarming the country, to give a ſerious appearance of rebellion to the outrages of a mob; you were to aggravate the importance of your ſervices, by changing a general diſlike of your adminiſtration into diſaffection to his Majeſty's perſon and government, and the riotous conduct that diſlike had occaſioned into premiditated rebellion. This ſcheme, Sir, is really an ingenious one; if it ſucceeds, you may poſſibly be rewarded for your ſervices with the honor of knighthood.

From the 16th of May to the 16th of June, you were buſied in ſecuring the allegiance of rioters, and levying contributions of beef and flour. You occaſionally amuſed yourſelf with burning a few houſes, treading down corn, inſulting the ſuſpected, and holding court martials. Theſe courts took cognizance of civil as well as military offences, and even extended their juriſdiction to ill-breeding and want of good manners. One Johnſton, who was a reputed regulator, but whoſe greateſt crime, I believe was writing an impudent letter to your lady, was ſentenced, in one of theſe military courts, to receive five hundred laſhes, and received two hundred and fifty of them accordingly. But, Sir, however exceptionable your conduct may have been, men were to be tried for a crime made capital by a temporary act of aſſembly of twelve months duration. That act had in great tenderneſs to his Majeſty's ſubjects, converted riots into treaſons, a rigorous and punctual execution of it was as unjuſt, as it was politically unneceſſary. The terror of the examples now propoſed to be made under it, was to expire with the law, in leſs than nine months after. The ſufferings of theſe people could therefore amount to little more than mere puniſhment to themſelves. Their offences were derived from public and from private impoſitions; and they were the followers, not the leaders in the crimes they had committed. Never were criminals more juſtly intitled to every lenity the law could afford them; but, Sir, no conſideration could abate your zeal in a cauſe you had tranſferred from yourſelf to your ſovereign. You ſhamefully exerted every influence of your character againſt the lives of theſe people. As ſoon as you were told that an indulgence of one day had been granted by the court to two men to ſend for witneſſes, who actually eſtabliſhed their innocence, and ſaved their lives, you ſent an aid-de-camp to the judges, and attorney-general, to acquaint them that you were diſſatisfied with the inactivity of their conduct, and threatened to repreſent them unfavourably in England if they did not proceed with more ſpirit and diſpatch. Had the court ſubmitted to influence, all teſtimony, on the part of the priſoners, would have been excluded; they muſt have been condemned to a man. You ſaid that your ſolicitude for the condemnation of theſe people aroſe from your deſire of manifeſting the lenity of government in their pardon. How have your actions contradicted your words! Out of twelve that were condemned, the lives of ſix only were ſpared. Do you know, Sir, that your lenity on this occaſion was leſs than that of the bloody Jefferies in 1685? He condemned five hundred perſons, but ſaved the lives of two hundred and ſeventy.

In the execution of the ſix devoted offenders, your Excellency was as ſhort of general Kirk in form, as you were of judge Jefferies in lenity. That general honoured the execution he had the charge of, with play of pipes, ſound of trumpets, and beat of drums; you were content with the ſilent diſplay of colours only. The diſgraceful part you acted in this ceremony, of pointing out the ſpot for erecting the gallows, and clearing the field around for drawing up the army in form, has left a ridiculous idea of your character behind you, which bears a ſtrong reſemblance to that of a buſy undertaker at a funeral. This ſcene cloſed your Excellency's adminiſtration in this country, to the great joy of every man in it, a few of your own contemptible tools only excepted.

Were I perſonally your Excellency's enemy, I would follow you into the ſhade of life, and ſhow you equally the object of pity and contempt to the wiſe and ſerious, and of jeſt and ridicule to the ludicrous. Truly pitiable, Sir, is the pale and trembling impatience of your temper, that no character, however diſtinguiſhed for wiſdom and virtue, can ſanctify the leaſt degree of contradiction to your political opinions. On ſuch occaſions, Sir, in a rage, you renounce the character of a gentleman, and precipitately mark the moſt exalted merit with every diſgrace the haughty inſolence of a governor can inflict upon it. To this unhappy temper, Sir, may be aſcribed moſt of the abſurdities of your adminiſtration in this country. It deprived you of every aſſiſtance men of ſpirit and abilities could have given you, and left you, with all your paſſions and experience about you, to blunder through the duties of your office, ſupported and approved by the moſt profound ignorance and abject ſervility.

Your pride has as often expoſed you to ridicule as the rude petulance of your diſpoſition has to contempt. Your ſolicitude about the title of HER EXCELLENCY for Mrs. Tryon, and the arrogant reception you gave to a reſpectable company at an entertainment of your own making, ſeated with your lady by your Ade on elbow chair, in the middle of a ball room, bespeak a littleness of mind, which, believe me, Sir, when blended with the dignity and importance of your office, render you truly ridiculous.

High stations have often proved fatal to those who have been promoted to them; your's, Sir, have proved so to you. Had you been contented to pass through life in a subordinate military character; with the private virtues you have, you might have lived serviceable to your country, and reputable to yourself; but, Sir, when, with every disqualifying circumstance, you took upon you the government of a province, though you gratified your ambition, you made a sacrifice of yourself.

Your's, &c. ATTICUS.

We are requested to inform the Public, that in Order to prevent their Pumps from freezing at Night, they should, just before they go to Bed, see that all the standing Water be pumped out, as it would be a great Misfortune, in Case of Fire in the Night, to have their Pumps froze.

I. WE present, as a Grievance, the want of creditable Persons to act as Magistrates; such Persons in general holding that Commission only to exempt them from rendering other Services for the Good of their Country, and by which the Execution of Justice is often entrusted with partial, unjust, trading Justices, to the great Hurt of honest good Men, and hurtful to the Province in general.

II. That sufficient Regard is not had to the Character of those Men who are entrusted with the Commission of the Peace, which appears by again impowering a present acting Justice, Fenwicke Bull, who was some Time ago deprived of that Commission from his bad Practices, publicly confessed by himself.

III. We present, as a Grievance, the Office of Constables, being in the Execution of Persons of a mean low Character, whose Poverty and Ignorance subject them to take Bribes, by which Villains do often escape Justice.

IV. We present, as a Grievance, the general Neglect of the Militia-Officers, in not mustering the Militia according to Law; and also, that the Patrole-Acts are not properly enforced.

V. We present, as a Grievance, the great Number of Dram-Shops and Tippling-Houses in Charles-Town, such as entertain Negroes and other disorderly Persons; and recommend, that the Magistrates would be more vigilant in suppressing such Pests of Society.

CHARLES-TOWN, FEBRUARY 4.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Grenada, to his Friends in this Town, dated January 4, 1772.

"GENTLEMEN,

"IT is with the greatest Concern, that I acquaint you of the dreadful Calamity that has befallen the Inhabitants of the late flourishing and opulent Town of St. George, which, with the greatest Part of the Goods and Merchandize therein, was, on the Night of the 27th Ultimo, consumed by Fire.

"The Store occupied by me, was among the first, in which was Thirty-five Tierces, and two half Tierces of Rice, the Residue of the Sukey and Nancy's Cargo; Thirty Tierces belonging to Captain Saltus, and Thirty-five Barrels of Bread and Flour of my own; which, together with my Cash, Cloaths, and Effects, (Books excepted) were burnt. The Fire raged with such Fury, that it was impossible for me to save any Thing, especially as I had no Assistance; even those whose Situation was remote from the Place the Fire began at, were prevented, by their Terror and Consternation. No Person that was not present, can form an Idea of the Horror of this dismal Night, or imagine the Distress it has occasioned; many worthy People who before lived in Affluence, are now reduced to the most abject Misery. The Number of Tenements burnt, are computed to be upwards of Four Hundred. An Estimate of the real Damage sustained, has not yet been made; but as many of the Merchants are ruined, the Consequence must be very fatal."

Mrs. Haven, Wife of William Haven, Esq; Naval-Officer of Georgia, and Miss Gordon, Sisters of the Honourable Thomas-Knox Gordon, Esq; Chief Justice of this Province, arrived here lately from Ireland.

Friday last his Majesty's Sloop Bonetta, Captain Squire, arrived here from the Bahamas.

MARRIED.] Doctor Peter Fayssaux, to Miss Sally Wilson, Daughter of Algernoon Wilson, Esq.

DIED.] John Hughes, Esq; Collector of his Majesty's Customs for this Port.----Mr. John Brown, Warden of the Work-House.

Dr. SMITH, intending to embark for Philadelphia, in four or five Days from this Date, begs Leave to acknowledge, with the highest Gratitude, the liberal Benefactions which he hath received towards the College in that City, from the worthy Inhabitants of this Province; as well as their many great Civilities shewn to himself, which no Length of Time can erase from his Memory. A FINE LOT for Sale by private Contract,

THAT valuable LOT of LAND in Charles-Town, known or diſtinguiſhed in the plan or model thereof, by the No. 291, ſituated at the weſt end and on the north ſide of Tradd-ſtreet, between the houſes of Alexander Fraſer, Eſq; and the late Captain Thomas Elliott, deceaſed, containing in front on ſaid ſtreet, fifty-eight feet, eight inches, or thereabouts, with the advantage of a paſſage; and in depth one hundred and forty-three feet, or thereabouts; whereon is a BRICK HOUSE deſigned for kitchens or two tenements that were intended to be built, and will ſtill ſerve thoſe purpoſes. This Lot has a fine proſpect of Aſhley-River, and as the proprietor of the oppoſite lot may perhaps make his front on Friend-ſtreet to be uniform with the other houſes built at the ſouth end and weſt ſide of that ſtreet, with the garden running eaſt and weſt, there will be no obſtruction to the ſoutherly air from Aſhley-River, which muſt be very agreeable in the hot months, and may prevent the communication of any malignant diſtemper that may rage in the interior parts of the town, or contagion ariſing from noxious effluvia. Its vicinity alſo to ſeveral good landing places on Aſhley-River, particularly the Sugar-Houſe-Creek, where a public market will no doubt be ſoon eſtabliſhed, will greatly enhance the value of all lands in that part of the town; alſo being ſituated in an excellent neighbourhood of reputable inhabitants, renders it not only more eligible, but ſecure againſt the danger of fire; and being a vacant lot, the purchaſer will have the ſatisfaction of erecting buildings thereon according to his own taſte for pleaſure or profit; the area or ground plot admitting either of one large manſion houſe of twelve rooms, or to be divided into two tenements of ſix rooms each, with land ſufficient behind for a kitchen garden to each. And, as houſes in that airy and pleaſant part of the town are ſeldom or ever empty, it will afford a certain good income quarterly.

The purchaſer may have one, two, three, or four years credit, giving bond, with approved perſonal ſecurity, and paying the intereſt punctually every year, and if he chuſes it, one third or one fourth part of the principal will be received annually, by which inſtalments, the purchaſe money will be eaſily and inſenſibly ſunk.

RICHARD-PARK STOBO.
